Wednesday Walk in Tarlo National Park (west) – 18November 2009

We drove through private property to reach a creek which we followed to the boundary of Tarlo N.P. – north west of Goulburn. It was a hot day and we only walked for a short distance into the park. The creek was nice and shady with Casuarina cunninghamii and was bounded by steep, dry, rocky hillsides with a completely different array of plants. Of interest was Acacia uncinata just starting to flower, Asrotricha longifolia in full flower and which none of us had seen before, many Calytrix tetragona just finishing their flowering and some good displays of Actinotus helianthi high up in the rocks.
